Notes to reconciliation of Japanese GAAP to IFRS

Reconciling the items below result from changes in presentation in the consolidated statement of financial position and have no impact on the consolidated statement of profit or loss and retained earnings.

- Under Japanese GAAP, trade receivables and liabilities that occur in ordinary business are presented in current assets and liabilities based on the company's normal operating cycle criteria. Assets and liabilities that are settled after 12 months have been disclosed as non-current assets and liabilities independently under IFRS because the company cannot define the normal operating cycle in IFRS.
- Under Japanese GAAP, the consolidated group securitizes certain trade receivables and derecognizes those receivables that meet the criteria for derecognition under Japanese GAAP. Under IFRS, trade receivables that do not meet the criteria of derecognition for financial instruments are recognized as trade receivables and related liabilities are recognized as short-term debt.
- Under Japanese GAAP, deferred tax assets and liabilities are presented separately according to their attributes in current assets and liabilities and non-current assets and liabilities. They have been reclassified as non-current assets and liabilities under IFRS.
- Under Japanese GAAP, affiliates' stocks are included in investments in securities. This has been disclosed as investments accounted for using the equity method as defined in IFRS independently.
- Under Japanese GAAP, interest income, interest income on installment sales, and dividend income are presented in non-operating income. They have been reclassified as financial income under IFRS.
- Under Japanese GAAP, interest expense and foreign exchange loss are presented in non-operating expense. They have been reclassified as financial expense under IFRS.
- Under Japanese GAAP, gains on sales of property, plant and equipment are presented in extraordinary income. This has been reclassified as other income under IFRS.
- Under Japanese GAAP, gains on sales of subsidiaries and affiliates' stocks are presented in extraordinary income. This has been reclassified as financial income under IFRS.
- Under Japanese GAAP, business structure improvement expenses and impairment losses are presented in extraordinary losses. They have been reclassified as other expenses under IFRS.

	(Millions of yen)
	As of March 31, 2014	As of April 1, 2013
Retained earnings under Japanese GAAP	220,122	199,779
Goodwill (see notes (1))	5,293	—
Employee benefits (see notes (2))	(19,583)	(19,643)
Income taxes (see notes (3))	7,941	8,754
Foreign currency translation adjustments (see notes (4))	(3,184)	(3,184)
Other	1,389	74
Retained earnings under IFRS	211,978	185,780

(1) Goodwill

- Under Japanese GAAP, goodwill has been amortized. IFRS prohibits amortization of goodwill. The reconciled amount related to goodwill has been reclassified as retained earnings in each fiscal year.

(2) Employee benefits

- Under Japanese GAAP, the expense out of actuarial gain or loss and past service cost that is not recognized in current period is recognized as accumulated other comprehensive income, and recognized profit or loss for a certain period of time. Under IFRS, actuarial differences from remeasurements of defined benefit obligations and changes in fair value of plan assets (excluding interest income) are to be recognized as OCI. Prior service cost arising from plan amendment is recognized immediately as profit or loss. Current service cost is recognized as incurred in profit or loss, and the net interest cost, measured by multiplying the discount rate on the net defined benefit obligation or asset, is recognized as profit or loss.
- With respect to computation of the retirement and severance benefits, the Company recalculates the benefit in compliance with IFRS, and all of amount arising from the difference of periodic allocation of retirement and severance benefits and computation of interest expense has been reclassified as retained earnings.
- Under Japanese GAAP, liabilities are not recognized for unused annual leave. IFRS requires recognizing liabilities. This adjustment has been reclassified as retained earnings.

(3) Income taxes

- With respect to unrealized gains and losses from intercompany transaction, a deferred tax asset is recognized by the effective tax rate of seller under Japanese GAAP. Under IFRS, deferred tax assets are recognized by the effective tax rate of buyer. Differed tax assets for temporally differences are recognized as a result of transition adjustments between Japanese GAAP and IFRS, and have been reclassified as retained earnings.

(4) Foreign currency translation adjustments

- The company applies the exemption of first-time adoption of IFRS, and all of cumulative exchange differences on translating foreign operations have been reclassified as retained earnings on the date of transition to IFRS.

Notes to reconciliation of Japanese GAAP to IFRS for consolidated cash flow statement

There is no material difference in cash flow statements between prepared in accordance with Japanese GAAP and those prepared in accordance with IFRS.
