

HMAP Delivers First Electronic Excavator in Singapore

Hitachi Construction Machinery Asia and Pacific (HMAP) has successfully delivered its first electronic excavator in Singapore, marking a major milestone in advancing eco-friendly construction solutions and supporting the nation's Zero Emission 2030 initiative.

ZX55U-6EB arrived in Singapore

The Hitachi ZX55U-6EB, a compact and fully electric hydraulic excavator, officially began operations on 2 May 2025 under rental by Quek & Quek Civil Engineering Pte Ltd. As a respected player in Singapore's infrastructure development sector, Quek & Quek has long been committed to incorporating sustainable technologies into its operations. The machine is currently deployed at a jobsite in Tengah, a key area in Singapore's smart and green town development efforts.

With zero exhaust emissions, reduced noise levels, and high operating efficiency, the ZX55U-6EB represents a new generation of construction equipment designed to meet both environmental and performance demands. This delivery marks not only a first for Singapore but also demonstrates HMAP's ongoing commitment to innovation and environmental stewardship.

As cities move toward cleaner and smarter construction practices, Hitachi Construction Machinery remains committed to support environmental sustainability by offering innovative solutions that help reduce emissions and minimize the industry's environmental impact.
